False Reports Germans At Work?

Two false reports are running like prairie fire through Canada.

1. That the Executive Committee are high-salaried officials.

Answer.—None of the Executive Committee receives one cent of salary from the Red Cross funds.

2. That the Red Cross Society sells socks to the men in the trenches.

Answer.—Not a single article entrusted to the Red Cross Society is sold with the knowledge or consent of the Society. The Society has endeavored to follow up all stories of such sort but has hitherto entirely failed to find a single instance of a man who has bought a pair of socks or any other article from the Red Cross.

Red Cross goods are distributed in three ways only:

(a) To officers commanding Canadian medical hospitals for the use of their patients.

(b) To Canadian sick and wounded in hospital, by a system of parcels, under Lady Drummond.

(c) To Canadian prisoners of war by a system under Mrs. Rivers-Bulkeley and Miss Stikeman.

How is it possible for it to be true that the Red Cross is selling socks to the men in the trenches? Red Cross goods never go into the trenches, only to patients in hospital and prisoners of war. We think our Commissioner was right when he called that such a report was "simply preposterous." Do the people of Canada really think that the Executive of the Red Cross, most of whom have never seen a trench or fighting at the front, are conspiring to rob the Canadian population of one pound and the Canadian soldier of the other?

We suggest these reports to be the work of German Secret Service agents trying to injure Red Cross work.

Officers of The Active Militia of Canada

3. Post Office Address.
4. If they are ready to serve with troops recruited and billeted during the coming winter and ready to go overseas if required.

Your obedient servant,

Important Case Settled

The case of Vasseur versus the C.P.R. in which action was taken for damages amounting to $3,000 for the loss of an infant's leg by being run over by a company train, was settled last week at Calgary, Vasseur securing several thousand dollars and the costs of the action. The accident occurred at Blairmore on 4th about November 4th, 1915. The Company at first made an offer of $100 and an artificial limb. Through Vasseur's solicitor, L. H. Putnam, a writ was issued against the Company in August, 1914. Since that time no further offer was made until Mr. George was to come up at Macleod in May last. The case was further adjourned from Macleod to Calgary, where hearing was to take place this month. Over thirty witnesses were about to be subpoenaed by Mr. Putnam in connection with the case, and some are of opinion that the C.P.R. came through because of insufficient rolling stock on its line for the transportation of Blairmore to the Alberta metropolis. George Walker acted as solicitor for the Company, and L. H. Putnam for Vasseur.

The Battle of the Marne

Considered to be the Greatest Battle in History

This pre-eminence, however, it is not indisputably conceded to the battle of the Marne, a year ago today, when the French and British armies, meeting the advance of the German army to capture the city of Paris, checked a week without any cessation of fighting either side, and the German men were determined to capture the French capital, and the British army was determined to preserve it from capture.

The allies prevailed; they drove the attacking German armies back to the line of the Aisne, where they have remained ever since in a military condition absolutely unprecedented in the history of war.

The issue at stake in the battle of the Marne was far greater than the points on the surface of any narrative of that week of fighting. It was, in the fullest sense of that term, one of the decisive battles of the world, for the defeat of the allies and the capture of Paris at that stage might easily have meant permanent disaster to France and injury hardly less calamitous to Great Britain. Germany, thoroughly prepared by years of persistent, intelligent, and costly preparation, was determined to fight a battle of attrition against France by way of Belgium at least a million men, and the British army, although inferior in numbers, was determined to fight a battle of attrition, and to defend Paris and France.

It is still more to be said that the battle of the Marne was a battle of attrition, and that the issue at stake was far greater than the points on the surface of any narrative of that week of fighting. Woman's Life Should Vary

A Humdrum Existence Is the Cause of Wives' Discontent

Nowadays a great deal is heard on all sides of the discontent of the housewife. There is said to be no important to our sex of the preceding generation, many cases look to be no charm to the modern wife of four, dining and general work necessary for the maintenance of the household, is required to make their lives interesting and varied.

And the state of affairs is peculiar to find who have given up an arduous office life for the hearth. They find their brains, which have been quickened and kept in good working order for many years, have little occupation in the homely task that fall to the lot of the wife, and they feel they are "dropping out of things" and losing much that made life so interesting.

Keeping a house clean for the sake of cleanliness is a duty, but cleaning a house for the effect it will have on the inhabitants is a pleasure. And that is where most of us lose our grip. We go through our housework as if it were a duty, and we never think of the pleasure that the sooner finished the better. We do not think of the pleasure that the sooner finished the better. We do not think of the pleasure that the sooner finished the better.

It is still more to be said that the battle of the Marne was a battle of attrition, and the issue at stake was far greater than the points on the surface of any narrative of that week of fighting. The Banner of

The Red Cross

The privilege of fighting at the front, under the folds and for the glory of the triplicate cross of Britain's war flag, is not for everybody. Only the pick of our manhood may aspire to that honor. But cavalierism under the banner that should stand next to the Union Jack in our loyalty—the banner of the Red Cross—is open to all. None too weak or poor to help in its upholding. From its service of mercy on every battlefield where our boys face wounds and death, there are no barriers of age or sex or sickness.

And there is a new call for recruits.
The work of relieving the sufferings of the wounded is heavier than could have been foreseen. The demand upon the funds of the Red Cross Society have consequently been overwhelming and prompt and heavy contributions are urgently needed. No work for humanity is better known or calls more loudly upon charity of every British subject at this time than the work of the Red Cross. To its appeals in the past, as well as in all the other calls upon their loyalty from every source, the people of the community have responded with wonderful generosity and there can be no doubt of their answer now.—The Montreal Daily Star.

In Defence of One Who Has Gone to Fight For King and Country

Mr. Editor:—

Please allow me a small space in your paper to defend J. M. Carter, who left for the front about a month ago. It is my wish to show the public how a once popular man of Blairmore, and whom the majority of the community have not little or no fear, could stoop so low as to stab a man in the back as soon as he was not here to defend himself. I secretly had the train which carried J. M. Carter left Calgary by one hundred miles when this poor fool who calls himself a man wrote the following—that Carter was a "stunt man" and lived up to his reputation." I myself think that Carter has more friends in The Pass today than that fellow who looks a government job and it is the duty of Carter's friends to defend him. The same man may think himself mighty lucky that Carter is not in Canada today. If he is lucky enough to return he shall attend to him then.

What do the public think of such a man?
If all reports are true this is not the first time he has done by a long way. It is himself, as the letter which he wrote came back to Blairmore. It is his time for silence and get the likes of these "muckers" off their jobs. The likes of this man would be in his proper place in the front line of trouble facing the country, so as to get off that is coming to him.

A Visit to The Provincial Red Cross Depot

On entering the Depot your attention is taken up with gazing at the number of busy workers, each at their allotted tables, with a Supervisor in each depart-

At the first table all finished work is taken in, each article examined carefully and garments, etc., not up to the standard put on one side to be further examined by the Superintendent of Supplies, by whom they are turned over to another department for alteration. At this same table all cotton goods requiring washing are thrown into a laundry basket. A list of all finished work brought in is also kept at this table.

At the next two tables three electricians are going almost continually, pressing all finished work, which is then taken to the basement for shipping.

Going further along the Depot at other three tables, women are cutting out all kinds of garments and tearing bandages—these are put on shelves and in cupboards, ready to be given out on Distributing Day (Wednesday), which is a very strenuous day at the Depot. These articles are also sent to auxiliaries and branches, where they do not do their own cutting or cannot procure good suitable. On the other hand all branches are recommended to buy in their own towns as far as possible.

We still go on further along the Depot where there are several sewing-machines, one at least being in use all the time fixing over badly made garments or making slight alterations. At this end of the building all the stores are kept, such as—bolts of cotton, etc.

We retrace our steps again to the other end of the floor and proceed to the basement where all packing is done. On the walls around the basement are placards as follows—pajamas, shirts, socks and so on—underneath each placard is a large packing case and as all the different articles are ironed and pressed on the floor above, they are brought to the basement and put in the separate cases

In the centre of the floor stands rows of cardboard boxes which are made at the Calgary box factory—all the same size—and in these the articles are packed for shipment to Toronto and from there on to England, to be distributed to the different hospitals. The time from leaving this Depot to reach destination is about six weeks; they are carried free by the C.P.R., who prefer to have big shipments so as not to take one whole car. The number of boxes thus sent vary from 50 to 70 every two weeks from the Red Cross Depot. The basement is also a large box for the clippings—these are sold each week.

We now go up to the third floor, where the busy click of the typewriter can be heard. Here, stenographers are working at their desks, hard at work on the Provincial Gazette, and other for the Superintendent of Supplies. A third is rarely needed as the work is increasing daily. In another room on this floor are the stenographers and patterns of all articles the Society makes. It is here that all the friends of groups get the orders for supplies which is then taken to the middle floor to be filled. In another room on the third floor is the office where all books are kept, also a record of how many articles have had to be altered from each branch and these are kept in a black mark against each of the above. This is not only kept in the Provincial Depot, but every record is forwarded

Toronto: When a shipment is made, headquarters know the different branches that have contributed, and what, and he

One cannot help thinking what a band of patriotic women they are who work there from 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m., and never even leaving the Depot for lunch, only having sandwiches to break the fast. The only salaries paid for workers in the Depot are for our stenographer, a woman altering garments, and a young man who sweeps up and looks after the heating.

I should advise anyone going to Calgary to visit the Red Cross Depot. You will be made welcome and will also get larger insight into the work that is being carried on for our boys.

The Ogden Red Cross Convalescence Home is another great feature and in the near future shall be flying the Red Cross flag. It has 64 rooms and is everything that could be wished for in the shape of a home for the boys—there were fourteen of them, some suffering from rheumatism and pneumonia, etc. Thirty more were in hospital in Calgary and will later take them, where, as the boys are to the home. There are two orders who clean the place, a woman cook's helper in the kitchen, a matron and nurse. The Calgary Branch Red Cross Society pay the matron and cook. The ettes and tobacco. They have a po room, bowling alley and several of games, also books and magazines. The men have breakfast at 8 a.m., dinner 12.30 and supper at 5 p.m., then go to bed at 8 p.m.—lights out at 9.30 p.m. yet there are no returned soldiers.

The Stingy Man

are expecting some almost any day. The home is visited each day by a doctor. There is a House committee of ladies and an Outside committee of gentlemen. Any one can spend a pleasant hour in the Home if they have the time to spare.

His face is dingy—the man who's stinky—none greet him with a frown; "He's always pinching, the nickle elenching, the tightwad of the town, when we pass around the hat, to give some peeper a moral that's proper, or least some widows flat. He lives to collect the large round dollar, with coin to the rub, and the silver dollar, the honored phrases can make him good up." Yet some are saying, "He's been at paying his bills up on time; he asks no more, it seems to me, than what he gets, and that's true. Some who blame him and try to shame him as cut out tightwad duds, are chislerful folks who owe the bankers and grocers for their goods, and the grocers and the pinch coin still it blows, than one who wanders round and stunders the coin his butcher needs. I hold it cleaner to eat stale wafers and swallow three molybdenum pills than to be a tightwad nuttier, like some half-sawed gente.
